John now understands more about Trial 1 without ever having left the page. He has investigated the description, understands the Therapeutic Area, what phase the trial is in, what geographic area the trial covers, and what constitutes the alert/problematic aspect of trial 1.

He then clicks the Trial ID cell for Trial 1 and sees specifically where the problem lies geographically, and in relation to the other areas of the trial.

Alternatively to the previous flow, John could have pursued this course at first login. In this view, John already has saved sets and pursues an analysis of France and Germany as part of Trial 1 in Project 1850 by effecting the left-hand filtering to instantly display that specific view. He does not pursue the more granular course of drilling in by directly effecting the table and map. Both scenarios have their merit and purpose. They are dependent on need, knowledge level, and efficiency.
